

Risks Management Resources: AboutRisk® Learning

Online education—empowering risk managers with tools for success. Healthcare risk management programs continue to evolve, taking a broader operational approach to decision making. As a result, there is a pressing need for mentoring and training—across a variety of healthcare settings—that provide an understanding of the fundamental skills, goals, elements and responsibilities needed for an effective risk management program.

The AboutRisk Learning Healthcare Risk Management Course provides the information necessary to assist risk professionals in achieving these goals, and demonstrates the value of an operational risk management approach to organizational leadership.

Key Course Features

- Self-paced learning
- On-demand, easily accessible web-based learning modules
- Dedicated program faculty with the opportunity for live discussion
- Certificate of Completion and ASHRM CEUs awarded at course completion
- Available to OneBeacon Healthcare Group® policyholders, and already included in their policies' cost

Time/Requirements

1-2 hours for each learning module, passing a series of brief exams, voluntary participation in a monthly conference call discussion, completion of a final written project

Program Objectives

- State the fundamental principles and processes of healthcare risk management
- Compare and describe the difference between a traditional and operational (enterprise) healthcare risk management program
- Identify, analyze and apply risk management data, supported by sample tools including root cause analysis (RCA) and failure mode effects analysis (FMEA)
- Give examples of the interrelationship of risk control, risk financing and claims management
- Design and implement an effective risk management program in a variety of healthcare settings

Tools for Learning

Illustrations of electronic risk identification, event analysis and data management tools are made possible through the generous assistance of RL Solutions and The Reliability Center.
